

Excerpts from Myron Wagner's upcoming book:

The crossroad to do right or wrong is at hand for me. I took a piece of candy without paying for it one day. I walked out of the store with the candy in my hand and no one saw me. I had this earth-shattering decision to make. I stopped and looked at the candy in my hand. I thought to myself, "Is this right or wrong?" I am at a crossroad. A crossroad to my character in doing what I think is right or wrong.

Not everyone shares the same moral values. To some, it's all right to take something because you need it; or because someone has more than you; or maybe just because you want it and you should be able to have what you want.

How can you make any adjustments when no one tells you anything is wrong? How can you understand when you never get the truth?
